

By implanting oxygen in a silicon wafer and annealing the wafer at a high temperature, IBM creates an SOI process that results in faster chips.