

Figure A

IP telephony yields cost savings to corporations, which can run voice and fax communications in the spare bandwidth of leased lines. Consumers can also benefit by using telephones to connect to Internet-telephony service providers.