

The simplified models of the differential and single-ended probes differ mainly by virtue of the differential probe's placing the ground inductances in series with an amplifier input instead of in series with the probe "ground."