

Figure 2 Dithering produces uncorrelated low-level noise (a). By sampling at a faster rate and thereby distributing dither noise over a wider frequency range, you reduce its level (b), and noise shaping can further diminish its audibility (c) (courtesy Terratec).