

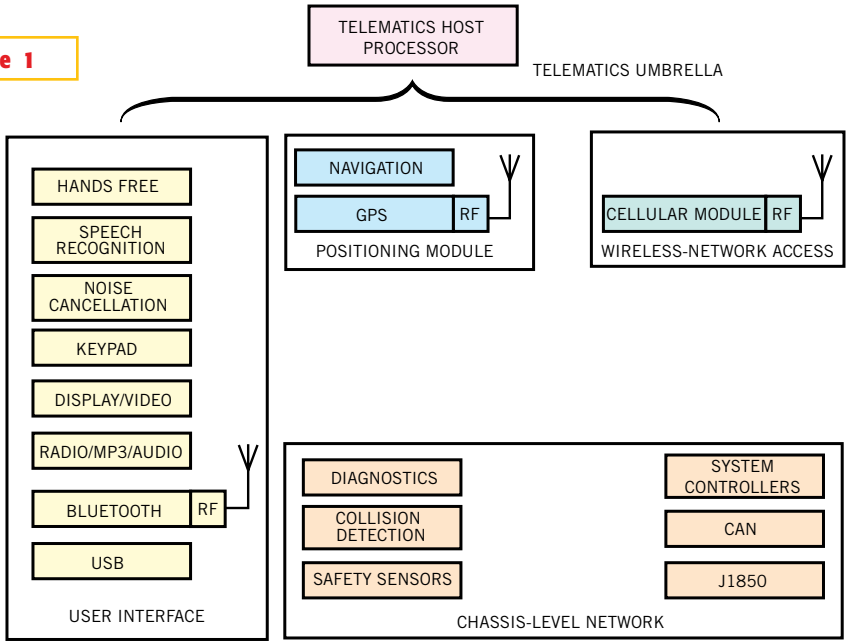

Figure 1

A telematics system is an umbrella application that integrates the functions from the user interface, the positioning module, the network-access device, and the chassis-level network.