

Adaptive computing allows designers to modify the hardware architecture of a device, depending on the functions it requires at any given time.