

Figure 2 Neah Power Systems speculates that a fuel-cell power system for notebook PCs might replace existing Li-ion batteries. The left and right pictures show different views of the same object. In the right-hand picture, the fuel-cartridge compartment is on top, even though, in normal use, it would be on the PC's bottom surface.