

Figure A The IMEC research organisation is working toward a stacked-die concept for ultimate integration of a health-and-comfort monitoring sensor that energy recovered from the environment would power, although the power efficiencies necessary still represent ambitious targets.