

Frequency masking enables the encoder to discard data that would be inaudible even if it existed in the decoded digital-audio bit stream (courtesy Creative Technology).