

Figure 2 Adaptive frequency hopping uses features available in Bluetooth 1.2 to restrict transmissions on channels on which another transmitter is occupying a fixed bandwidth. The result is fewer collisions and greater throughput (courtesy STMicroelectronics).