

Figure 1 The artificial eye performs digital processing on data that a digital camera captures and passes the processed results to the patient through an electrode implanted directly on the patient's retina (courtesy Biomimetic MicroElectronic Systems at the University of Southern California).

---