

Figure A IBM's statistical timing approach starts from one process point and computes sensitivities, rather than performing analysis at all possible corners.

---