

Figure 3 Even at a constant forward current, an LED's light output correlates strongly with temperature and can vary by as much as 100% over the entire operating-temperature range (upper curve).

