

Figure 5 This copper-clad board has two antennas soldered to opposite sides of the same ground plane. When you operate circuits with fast edges on the board, the antennas radiate significant amounts of RF, even though they galvanically connect (courtesy Glen Dash).
