

Figure 1 A current flowing through a semiconductor in the Y direction produces a negligible potential difference in the X direction.