

Figure 3 You can see strain patterns in the material by looking at stressed plastic with polarized light. The closer the fringes, the higher the strain is at that point (courtesy Robert Mark, Princeton University).

---

