

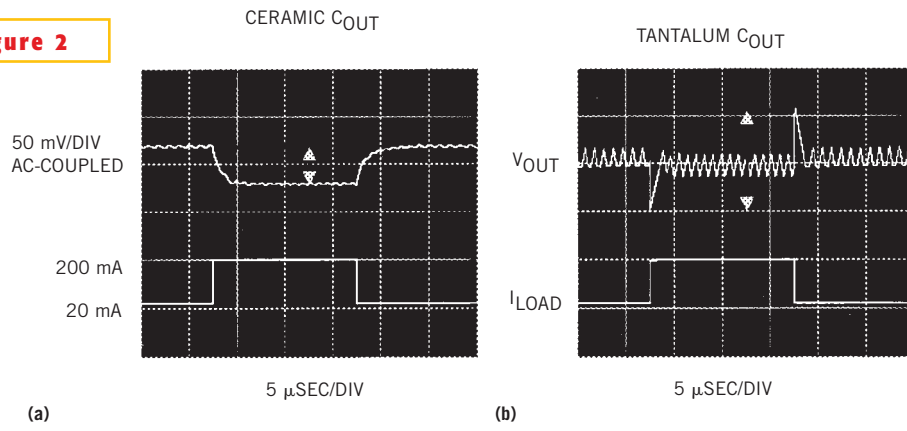

Figure 2

Load-transient response waveforms show that using a ceramic output capacitor produces lower output ripple and less overshoot (a) than the standard application circuit with a tantalum output capacitor (b).